"The Great Sensation"—Lyceum. A great drama about a beautiful young girl's craze for thrills—this is the theme of "The Great Sensation," which is one of the two features at the Lyceum. The other is "My Lady's Lips," a romance steeped in mystery. For the last half of the week the pictures will be "The Homesteaders" and "The Sporting Chance." May McKay in "Tessie" is looked for early showing.

William Fairbanks and Pauline Garon have great parts in "The Great Sensation."

"My Lady's Lips" is a sure-fire detective play in which the detective's part is carried on by a young reporter, played by William Powell. Alyce Mills and Clara Bow both have excellent parts.

AT THE PALACE. Milton Sills in "The Knockout" makes his last appearance tonight at the Palace theater. The second showing will be at 9 o'clock.

Wednesday and Thursday brings the fast moving comedy drama, "Wild Wild Susan," starring Bebe Daniels. In "Wild Wild Susan," Bebe plays the role of a peppy society girl who cannot live without excitement. There must be something doing every minute of her life.

After causing a traffic jam in the busiest section of the city, jumping off the Leviathan as it leaves the pier and manipulating a crippled elevator car in a wild ride skyward, Bebe decides to become a detective to inject excitement in an otherwise uneventful life.

Here is a novel plot, interesting, funny and exciting. "Wild Wild Susan" is not an animal story although it is a bear for thrills. Co-starring with Wild Wild Susan is Percy Marmont in a soul-stirring drama, "A Woman's Faith," where in a mother trusts in God to save her son and that trust is finally fulfilled.

PAT ROONEY TAKES PARSONS' BY STORM

"Daughter of Rosie" O'Grady
Top Notch Dancing Show

(By Herald Reviewer.)
In the history of Parsons' theater, few entertainers have been accorded a warmer reception than that tendered Pat Rooney last night when he began a week's engagement in "The Daughter of Rosie O'Grady." Rooney simply took the city by storm. There is no other way of expressing it. From curtain to curtain a large first night audience spent its time rocking with laughter and applauding the efforts of Rooney and his company of 60 singers and dancers.

"The Daughter of Rosie O'Grady" is essentially a dancing show with a thread of Irish romance woven through the plot. Pat himself is a marvel but he isn't alone. Marion Brent, who in private life is Mrs. Rooney, and young Pat contribute largely to the success of the comedy. And the star on the female side of the house is dainty Helen O'Shea, as light on her toes as a sunbeam dancing through a bed of shamrocks and as sweet in personality as the most charming colleen that ever smiled at a New York policeman.

It must be in the Rooney blood, this dancing. Pat has surrounded himself with as nimble a cast as ever graced the footlights. They must all be 2nd cousins of his. There is so much dancing talent in the show that it bulges out at the sides. To mention a few, there are Si Lyman and Helen Kling, Vivienne Glenn, Rose Kessner, Muriel Stryker, Anita Nix and Rondeline Simeonow. In addition to the dancing, there is singing by Martha Vaughn, Frank Corbett and others.

Members of the cast include Lida Kane, Frank Gardiner, Judd Rees, Gerald Smoko, Ed. Kay, Elsie Brooks and Rex Adams.

The scenery is novel and attractive. The music, furnished by the company's orchestra, is catchy and sweet.

If you enjoy good dancing and good music, more good dancing and more good music, and then some more good dancing and good music, brown in for good measure, go to see "The Daughter of Rosie O'Grady." See it if you have to swim, if you have to walk to Hartford. And if you get to Hartford, force your way into Parsons, if you have to watch the show while hanging from the chandelier, if there is a chandelier.

S. R. and L. Girls' Club
Adopts Near East Way

Orphaned by the cruelty of the Turks and having already passed through more harrowing experiences than most of the ordinary person in a lifetime, twelve-year-old Araxie Boghosian has finally found a protector in the Stanley Rule and Level Girls' club. This club has adopted her through the Near East Relief and will pay $100 a year to clothe and feed her and allow her to finish her schooling.

Araxie was born in Sheyrin in 1913, and when only four years old was captured with her parents by the Turks when Sheyrin was pillaged and destroyed by fire. Her father was killed and died of starvation, while Araxie and her mother were held by the Turks until the Armistice, when they were rescued by the Near East Relief. Araxie was placed in an orphanage at Trebizond, a port on the Black sea, and shortly afterward learned that her mother had died.

Just previous to the great Smyrna disaster, the Near East Relief was advised to move all its orphaned charges out of Turkish territory, and Araxie was one of a number taken down through the Dardanelles to Greece. She is now in Corinth, Greece, and has made a very good record in her schooling, advancing to the fourth grade. She has four years more ahead of her at this school, during which time she will take up, in addition to regular studies, such practical courses as nursing, teaching, lace weaving, and dressmaking. That she will receive the proper training and, after all her distressing experiences, go forth into the world with a bright outlook and adequate preparation, will be seen to by the local girls' club.
